Brussels, 3 July 2008.

Dear Madam,

I am writing in reference to your article entitled "Member Nations Balk At World Customs Organization IP Enforcement Push", hosted at the following Web site : <http://www.ip-watch.org/weblog/index.php?p=1117> and posted on 27 June 2008. The said article provides the reader with links to PDF documents.

I hereby wish to inform you that the document entitled "REPORT OF SECURE WORKING GROUP" and hosted at the following Web site : <http://www.ip-watch.org/files/WCO%20-%20SECURE%20-%20Policy%20Commission%20-%209%20June.pdf> is copyright protected and the sole property of the WCO, as is the case for all WCO documents bearing a copyright reference. Furthermore, the above-mentioned document contains confidential information, such as nominal data, which may not be divulged to unauthorized parties.

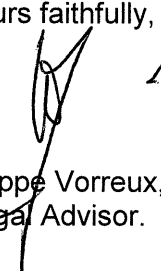

Given that no agreement has been signed with the WCO to permit the online publication of the "REPORT OF SECURE WORKING GROUP" in your article, the inclusion of such a link constitutes an infringement of the WCO's intellectual property rights. For that reason, you are instructed to remove the link to the above-mentioned document henceforth and to cease publishing it in any form whatsoever.

Should you continue to include a link to this copyright protected document in your article, then the WCO shall have no option but to initiate all necessary legal proceedings to put an end to this infringement of the Organization's intellectual property rights.

Finally, please note that the WCO retains the right of reply to your article. It shall therefore produce a document on this matter you should publish on your Web site.

I look forward to your prompt reply.

Yours faithfully,

Philippe Vorreux,
Legal Advisor.
