

International
IP Policy News

Dear Sir, Madam,

Intellectual Property Watch is a recognised leading information source on international intellectual property and innovation policy, relied upon by intergovernmental and government officials, lawyers, academics, advocates and industry analysts.

We cover key policy and legal developments related to patents, copyright and trademarks in areas such as digital content and knowledge access, development, public health, climate change, agriculture, biotechnology, finance, and trade.

Intellectual Property Watch, ip-watch.org, based in Geneva, Switzerland, with correspondents worldwide, covers debates at international organisations such as the World Intellectual Property Organization, World Health Organization, World Trade Organization and other key global and national-level agencies. We offer a uniquely international and balanced perspective encompassing the views of all stakeholders, including developed and developing countries, lawyers, industry, and civil society.

An institutional subscription to Intellectual Property Watch at a deeply discounted rate will allow you to access the entirety of the website, including subscriber stories, special features and our 16-page Monthly print edition. All stories and the monthly publication are fully searchable online and provide an attractive almanac of international discussions through informative, innovative and investigative stories and interview.

Institutional subscriptions offer immediate and complete access to multiple users at incrementally decreasing prices.

If you would be interested in learning more about a group subscription, please contact us and we will gladly provide you with our institutional subscription pricing schedule. Alternatively, you may subscribe directly on our website <http://www.ip-watch.org>, which displays the subscription rates.

For further information or questions, please contact us at: info@ip-watch.ch.

Best regards,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "willeee", written in a cursive style.

William New
Editor-in-Chief